

The Creator Speaks

SABBATH AFTERNOON

Read for This Week's Study: Gen. 1:27, 28; Gen. 3:1–8; Luke 15:11–32; Gen. 3:14–24; Exod. 19:16–22; John 10:27–30.

Memory Text: “God, who at various times and in various ways spoke in time past to the fathers by the prophets, has in these last days spoken to us by His Son, whom He has appointed heir of all things, through whom also He made the worlds” (Hebrews 1:1, 2, NKJV).

Digital technology allows many of us to see friends and relatives in faraway places. This is fine. But, still, how much better to meet in person! There is something special that happens when we get together, exchange hugs, and talk face-to-face.

This week we will be reminded that human beings were created for a face-to-face relationship with their Creator. Sin, however, destroyed this intimate connection long ago. To restore that communication with His beloved creatures, God has provided ways to speak to us. His most recognized form of divine interaction with humankind is carefully chosen spokespersons, known as prophets, who reveal His messages to us. These prophets often have writings in the Bible, but not always.

God's ultimate plan is to restore His image in us, the image that sin has shattered. This is what the plan of salvation is about: restoration, a restoration that will be complete when God creates “new heavens and a new earth in which righteousness dwells” (2 Pet. 3:13, NKJV).

Until then, God still talks to us, and He still uses His prophets to do just that.

Communication in Eden

Genesis 1 and 2 tell the Creation story. God created a beautiful world, and in it He put Adam and Eve, the crowning act of Creation. Humans differed from every other creature on earth because they were made “in the image of God” (Gen. 1:27, NKJV), something said only about them and not, for example, about the birds or about other animals. As such, they were to live wholistically abundant lives, experience love in all its forms, and walk in communion with God Himself.

Also, we read in Genesis 2:18–23 that God created Eve for Adam because, God said, it was “ ‘not good that man should be alone’ ” (Gen. 2:18, NKJV). Right from the beginning, then, humans were created as social beings. Sociologists today teach that human interaction provides numerous benefits to our physical and mental well-being, while loneliness is a killer.

It is no wonder, then, that after the creation of Eve, Adam exclaimed, “ ‘This is now bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh; she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man’ ” (Gen. 2:23, NKJV). The familial structure established by one male and one female joined in matrimony is the first social institution God provided for humans, in order for them to experience wholistic relationship and communion. It is no wonder that one of Satan’s main goals always has been to destroy the fundamental dynamics of the original family.

Read Genesis 1:27, 28; Genesis 2:15–17; and Genesis 3:9. What kind of communication existed between God and humans in the Garden of Eden?

Adam and Eve enjoyed face-to-face communion with God. As intelligent beings, they were able to meet with God and to listen to His instructions. As stewards of God’s wonderful garden, they grew in knowledge and skill as they cared for the living flora and fauna. Each day they also had special time with God “in the cool of the day” (Gen. 3:8). The Sabbath day in particular, an essential part of God’s creative act, was to be a specially dedicated time of communion between God and His children (Gen. 2:2, 3; Exod. 20:8–11). On that day, our first parents experienced God’s love and care for them in a special way.

It’s hard for us today, thousands of years from Eden, to imagine what it must have been like before sin. Yet, even now, how does the natural world point back to God’s original creation?

Hiding From God

Because God is love (1 John 4:8), He would not create human “robots.” Love embraces choice. To be able to love, Adam and Eve had to be created with free will; otherwise, love, true love, would be impossible for them to give.

Thus, Adam and Eve had the freedom to obey or disobey their Creator. The reality of this free choice was depicted in the command not to eat from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil (see Gen. 2:15–17). Why warn them against eating from it unless they had the freedom to do so in the first place?

“Our first parents, though created innocent and holy, were not placed beyond the possibility of wrongdoing. God made them free moral agents, capable of appreciating the wisdom and benevolence of His character and the justice of His requirements, and with full liberty to yield or to withhold obedience. They were to enjoy communion with God and with holy angels. . . . Without freedom of choice, his obedience would not have been voluntary, but forced.”—Ellen G. White, Patriarchs and Prophets, pp. 48, 49.

Why did Adam and Eve attempt to hide from their Creator after they disobeyed Him? See Genesis 3:1–8 (compare with Jer. 23:24 and Heb. 4:13).

Genesis 3 depicts an awful scene—the fall of Adam and Eve. After the epic conversation between the serpent (Satan) and Eve, our first parents were tempted to eat from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, which they were forbidden to do. Satan used the power of words, emotions, and pleasurable enticements to convince Eve, who then convinced Adam, to go against God’s command. Eve noted that the tree was “good for food,” “pleasant to the eyes,” and “desirable to make one wise” (Gen. 3:6, NKJV). The promise of Satan that they would be “‘like God, knowing good and evil’” (Gen. 3:5, NKJV), sounded irresistible.

In reality, Satan’s discourse was riddled with error. Satan hid from them the consequences of their disobedience. After they disobeyed God, their eyes were immediately “opened,” and they saw that they were “naked.” God’s “garment” of light and glory (Ps. 104:1, 2), which reflected the divine “image,” was gone. They were no longer covered by that which God had provided for them. No wonder Adam and Eve hid themselves from their Creator (as if it were really possible to hide from God). They attempted to hide because sin makes us feel guilty and, in our guilt, we want to flee from the presence of God.

What has been your own experience with shame and seeking to hide from God after you have sinned?

God Seeks Humanity

We can see from Genesis 3:9, 10 that God took the initiative to seek His fallen children. The question “Where are you?” was rhetorical, because God knew what Adam and Eve had done and where they were. Sin, nevertheless, cut off the usual communication that existed between Him and the first human couple. God’s immediate concern was to restore communication with His children, to meet with them, and to give them hope in their despair. In fact, the Hebrew verb qara, “call,” in Genesis 3:9, is often used to describe God’s call to establish communication with His people.

Read Luke 15:11–32. How does this parable reflect what happened in Genesis 3:9, 10?

God’s seeking Adam and Eve reveals His unconditional love for His children. God never gives up on us (see Luke 15). He goes to great lengths to reestablish His communion with us, even when we go into hiding. Before Jesus’ crucifixion, when Peter denied Jesus three times, Christ “turned and looked” (Luke 22:61, NKJV) at him. Even without words, He “spoke” to Peter and sought to reach His erring friend.

Notice, in Genesis 3:11–13, how sin suddenly changed Adam’s and Eve’s relationship. Instead of confessing their individual sin, they began to blame others. Adam blamed Eve and, indirectly, God, because He gave him Eve. “ ‘The woman whom You gave to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I ate,’ ” he said (Gen. 3:12, NKJV). Eve, meanwhile, blamed the serpent for her disobedience. “ ‘The serpent deceived me, and I ate’ ” (Gen. 3:13) was her excuse. Neither one of them, at least when first confronted for their sin, would own up to their own guilt. How little has changed in six thousand years.

The reality is that sin has affected all human beings. The apostle Paul describes our condition well in Romans 7:15–24, when he detailed the pain of desiring to do what is right, only to find himself doing the opposite: “For what I am doing, I do not understand. For what I will to do, that I do not practice; but what I hate, that I do” (Rom. 7:15, NKJV).

Who cannot relate?

What Paul says is profound. We are all broken people who keep on doing things we know we should not do. Who hasn’t experienced this reality?

Our only hope, says Paul, is deliverance “through Jesus Christ our Lord” (Rom. 7:25). This is why God continues to seek us to lead us to Jesus, who alone can mold us into His image and save us from the devastation caused by sin.

Expelled From the Garden

One of the most devastating consequences of Adam's and Eve's sin was separation from God. They were expelled from the Garden and could no longer speak with God face-to-face. The prophet Isaiah memorably wrote about this challenging human condition: "Your iniquities have separated you from your God; and your sins have hidden His face from you" (Isa. 59:2, NKJV).

In truth, Adam and Eve were still God's children. However, the result of sin could not be avoided, and they had to leave Eden. Nothing was the same after their disobedience.

Sin has changed humanity in many ways (see Gen. 3:14–24). But how has sin specifically changed our communication with God? (See also Exod. 19:16–22.)

Sin entirely changed human life in ways we cannot imagine, and that is because all we know is a world of sin. Because of sin, the land was "cursed" and was to produce "thorns and thistles." Humans would now experience pain, and they would have to "sweat" in order to provide food for themselves, only finally to die and return to the ground. Of all the reminders of sin, death remains the most powerful. At the same time, too, we lost our face-to-face communication with God because of sin.

However, Adam and Eve were promised a solution to counteract the ravages of sin. Although our first parents were not to see and talk to God directly, they left Eden with hope for the present and future. God took the initiative and explained to them His rescue plan.

Genesis 3:15, what has been called "the first gospel promise," was filled with hope for them (and us), despite what had happened. The promise of a coming Redeemer would provide present enmity against sin and hope for the future salvation of humanity. In fact, God's provision of clothing for Adam and Eve before they left the Garden was a symbolic act depicting their future redemption. Through the future death and resurrection of Jesus, communion with God was to be restored (John 14:1–3).

That is, right there in Eden, right after the entrance of sin, humanity was given the hope and promise that the sin problem ultimately would be solved. As soon as there was sin, there was the promise of a Savior.

How have you felt after doing something that was not right? Guilt? Shame? Self-loathing? What were the consequences? How did your faith in God, and the promise of the gospel, keep you from giving up on faith entirely?

God's Spokespeople

What do the following texts reveal about how God has spoken to humanity after the entrance of sin? (Read Heb. 1:1, 2; Rom. 1:19, 20; Num. 12:6; 2 Tim. 3:16, 17; John 14:7–9; John 10:27–30.)

In spite of sin, God found many ways to communicate with fallen human beings. One way God reveals Himself to us is through creation. Nature is a powerful revelation of His wonderful acts. Scientists are amazed by the wonders of our universe and at the complexity of even the “simplest” life. Yet, nature also displays the consequences of the Fall, with the death of every living thing the most powerful example.

Another way in which God has spoken to humanity is through the prophets—individuals whom He has chosen as His spokespersons. For example, God spoke to Noah, Abraham, Moses, and Daniel, revealing His will for His people. At their core, God’s prophetic messages are a reminder that He has not forgotten His children and is still with them. And though some of the prophets wrote what has come to us as Scripture, others never wrote any books of the Bible.

However, many of the prophets’ words were communicated through Scripture (2 Tim. 3:16, 17). The Bible is a revelation of God Himself. It is through His words that we learn who He is, see His relentless love, and discover His guidance for how we are to live.

Moreover, it is through the Bible that we understand who we are, where we came from, and where we are going. There we find God’s purpose for our lives.

But the most effective way in which God has spoken to us is through Jesus Christ, who, of course, is revealed to us in the Bible. As God sought Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden, so Christ came to “seek and to save that which was lost” (Luke 19:10). “ ‘He who has seen Me has seen the Father,’ ” Jesus declared (John 14:9, NKJV). Through His life, death, and resurrection, Christ fulfilled the promise given to Adam and Eve in Eden. He came and died in our place so that we may have eternal life through Him.

After Jesus’ ascension to heaven, the Holy Spirit has continued to guide us “ ‘into all the truth’ ” and to speak to us of “ ‘what is yet to come’ ” (John 16:13, NIV).

How much comfort do you get from knowing that Jesus, His love, His character, and His self-sacrifice reveal to us what God the Father is really like?

Ellen G. White

God's communication is not limited to biblical times. As we will see in coming weeks, God speaks to human beings in perpetuity, and His words will be manifested in modern ways until Christ returns.

Ellen Gould Harmon (White) and her twin sister, Elizabeth, were born on November 26, 1827, in Gorham, Maine. They were the youngest of eight children born to Robert and Eunice Harmon. In a few years, the family moved to the city of Portland, Maine, where Robert Harmon hoped to expand his hat-making business. At age nine, Ellen suffered an injury that affected her physically, emotionally, and socially. While she was in a park near her home, an angry classmate threw a stone that struck her in the face, leaving Ellen in a semiconscious state for several weeks. This accident abruptly ended her formal education and left her with lifelong health challenges. The facial injuries also left Ellen self-conscious about her appearance, limiting her social interactions.

It is in this context of uncertainty that the young Ellen Harmon began to think about her spiritual destiny. She was afraid of God and felt unworthy of heaven. Such fearful feelings intensified when the Harmon family accepted the Millerite doctrine of the soon second coming of Jesus. Even after her baptism by immersion into the Methodist Church in 1842, Ellen did not feel worthy of God's love. She believed she was "forever lost" (Life Sketches of Ellen G. White, p. 29; also see pp. 20–31).

Amid these agonizing thoughts, young Ellen had two dreams that began to change her mind about God. But it was not until she met Levi Stockman, a Methodist preacher, that she understood and felt God's love and grace. It was as if God spoke to her in her despair. "Faith now took possession of my heart," she wrote later. "I felt an inexpressible love for God and had the witness of His Spirit that my sins were pardoned. My views of the Father were changed. I now looked upon Him as a kind and tender parent, rather than a stern tyrant compelling men to a blind obedience. My heart went out toward Him in a deep and fervent love."—Life Sketches of Ellen G. White, p. 39. At the same time, Ellen White also understood the doctrine of the "state of the dead" and gradually grasped the idea that there was no forever-burning hell. Her new understanding of God and His love completely changed her attitude. As we will learn each Friday in the weeks to come, Ellen White fell deeply in love with Jesus and served Him for the rest of her life.

Hearts Awakened: The Beginnings of Adventism in Poland

In 1888, as Poland remained partitioned and its people struggled under foreign rule, a flicker of new spiritual light appeared—small, quiet, and full of promise. That year, Herman Szkubowiec, the first Pole to become a Seventh-day Adventist, moved from the Crimea to Zarnówka in Volhynia, establishing what would become the first Adventist church in Polish territory.

From these humble beginnings, the Adventist message began spreading. In 1893, two early Polish converts, Karol Fendel and Jozef Szlodzinski, traveled from Zarnówka to Łódź. There, they shared their faith with a Baptist family named Lach. The Lachs embraced the Adventist message, opening their home for Sabbath worship. It was not an easy time to share new religious ideas. Poland's political and religious environment was dominated by tradition and suspicion of outsiders. Yet in the heart of Łódź, amid adversity and uncertainty, the Adventist message took root in prayerful home gatherings. By 1895, a new congregation had formed in Łódź, nurtured by public meetings held by Russian Pastor Henrich Loeb sack, who baptized the first Adventist members in the city.

A inspirational moment came when Pastor Herbert Schmitz, a German who spoke no Polish, felt called to preach in Warsaw. Undeterred by the language barrier, he went door to door, searching for German names. When welcomed in, he explained the Adventist faith. Though his audience was small and mostly German-speaking, this seed of faith grew. In a few months, a church was organized in the capital, eventually conducting services in Polish as well.

By 1912, the growing work in Poland led to the formation of the Polish Mission, with Schmitz as its first leader. That same year, the Moravian-Silesian Mission was also organized, reaching southern Polish territories such as Bielsko-Biała, Cieszyn, and Skoczów. This mission laid the groundwork for generations of Polish Adventist ministers.

Despite the devastation of World War I, the Adventist message continued to spread. In 1921, the Seventh-day Adventist Union in Poland was officially organized. With 1,080 members at the time, the newly unified conferences set out to rebuild and expand. Evangelistic meetings, literature ministry, and schools followed.

But perhaps the most remarkable story remains that of those early missionaries—humble pioneers knocking on doors, preaching in private homes, and baptizing new believers in secret.

When Poland celebrated the centennial of Adventist work in 1988, the small group meeting in the Lach family home had become a vibrant national church. Their courage and conviction remind us that the gospel's light shines brightest in dark places, kindled by faith, fanned by love, and carried by those willing to go.

Introduction

In Genesis 2:4–25, Adam and Eve enjoyed intimate fellowship with God, walking and talking with Him face-to-face. However, after Adam and Eve’s tragic fall into sin disrupted this communion, humanity’s original parents lost their direct line of communication with the Creator. Yet, God did not abandon His pursuit of humanity. Instead, He established new ways to communicate, mediating His presence through prophets, the Written Word, and, ultimately, His Son, Jesus Christ. This first lesson affirms that, although God’s mode of communication changed after the Fall, His desire to speak with humanity has never ceased. Today, God continues communicating through the Scriptures, where the prophets and apostles bear unified witness to Christ. As a contemporary manifestation of this divine communication, Ellen G. White also points to Christ by affirming the biblical witness.

Part II: Commentary

1. Adam and Eve enjoyed perfect fellowship with one another and intimate, face-to-face communion with God in the Garden of Eden.

Adam and Eve were created in a perfect world beyond our fondest imaginations. The Garden of Eden was the sacred dwelling place of God’s presence on earth. As the triune God is inherently relational, He created human beings in His image in order to reflect this relational nature. His greatest gift to unfallen humanity was the capacity to engage with Him in personal and relational communion. Adam and Eve thus enjoyed direct, face-to-face fellowship with God in this perfect setting.

2. Sin disrupted the perfect situation in the Garden of Eden, and humans lost face-to-face communion with God.

The moment that the sinless Adam and Eve partook of the forbidden fruit, they experienced a new sense of self-awareness: “Then the eyes of both were opened, and they knew that they were naked.” Consequently, “they sewed fig leaves together and made themselves loincloths” (Gen.

3:7, ESV). The intimate, perfect, face-to-face communion with God was broken. When the fearful pair “heard the sound of the LORD God walking in the garden in the cool of the day,” an experience they had previously joyfully welcomed, they now “hid themselves from the presence of the LORD God among the trees of the Garden” (Gen. 3:8, ESV).

According to Richard Davidson: “When God comes to the garden after Adam and Eve have sinned, [H]e initiates an encounter that constitutes nothing less than a ‘legal process,’ a ‘trial punishment by God.’ God begins the legal proceedings with an interrogation of the ‘defendants,’ and the defensive and accusatory responses by Adam and Eve (Gen. 3:9–14) indicate the rupture in interhuman (husband-wife) and divine-human relationships that has occurred as a result of sin. Following the legal interrogation and establishment of guilt, God pronounces the sentence in the form of curses (over the serpent and the ground, vv. 14, 17) and judgments (for the man and the woman, vv. 16–19).”—Davidson, Flame of Yahweh: Sexuality in the Old Testament (Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers, 2007), pp. 58, 59.

Sad to say, Adam and Eve were cast out of the Garden, and God “placed the cherubim and a flaming sword” to guard the “way to the tree of life” (Gen. 3:24, ESV). “The cherubim guarding Eden represent more than armed guards. They signal the beginning of God’s presence drawn back to the heavens, and a mediated presence on earth through symbols and messengers/angels.”—Dru Johnson, The Universal Story: Genesis 1–11, Transformative Word, ed. Craig G. Bartholomew et al. (Bellingham, WA: Lexham Press, 2018), p. 52.

3. As soon as sin entered the world, God took the initiative to restore His relationship with lost humanity.

Adam and Eve were devastated. Their world had changed for the worse in an instant. As the guilty pair listened to God pronounce curses and judgments, they heard a promise of hope. At the very heart of these judgments, the gospel of grace appeared. A promised Seed would come and defeat the serpent and accomplish salvation for human beings. Genesis 3:15 is the literary center of Genesis 3 and is considered the first announcement of the gospel.

Immediately after Adam and Eve’s fall into sin, God announced that all future divine revelations would center on the person and mission of the coming Redeemer. The rest of Scripture flows out of this promise. “This astounding proclamation of God’s determination to send the Seed and defeat the serpent (Satan) in order to secure humanity’s redemption is the foundation and key for the recognition of the prophetic voice in the Old Testament.”—Jiří Moskala, “The Prophetic Voice in the Old Testament:

An Overview,” in Alberto R. Timm and Dwain N. Esmond, eds., The Gift of Prophecy in Scripture and History (Silver Spring, MD: Review and Herald Publishing Association, 2015), p. 11.

Interestingly, the word used for “called” in Genesis 3:9 is the same word used when God called the prophets to their ministry (Isa. 51:2). Although it is used here in the context of judgment, the connotation of connection and relationship is present.

4. After the Fall, by speaking in various ways, ultimately in the person of Jesus Christ, God opened the lines of communication with sinful humanity.

No longer able to see God with mortal sight or hear His voice audibly, human beings received divine communication through human intermediaries. Hebrews 1:1 says that God “spoke to our fathers by the prophets” (ESV). For centuries, God communicated with His people through such spokespersons as Noah, Enoch, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, Samuel, David, and the canonical prophets. He gave revelations to these individuals “at many times and in many ways,” such as theophanies, dreams and visions, divine speech, and angels. He also spoke through the Urim and Thummim, miracles, and signs. These are the ways in which God spoke in the past during the Old Testament era.

“But in these last days he has spoken to us by his Son” (Heb. 1:2, ESV). The words of the Old Testament are still authoritative as the Word of God, but they must be read through the fulfillment realized in Jesus Christ. He is the ultimate and definitive revelation of God. “The old came in fragmentary, episodic fashion—here a little, there a little—and, as a result, was incomplete, partial, and imperfect. But the new comes in one climactic speech of God the Father, at one time, in one person: His Son. With Jesus, all the revelation of God from the OT is gathered up and surpassed.” —William G. Johnsson, “Hebrews,” in Ángel M. Rodríguez, ed., Andrews Bible Commentary (Berrien Springs, MI: Andrews University Press, 2022), pp. 1824, 1825.

5. Ellen G. White’s conversion experience prepared her to be a Christ-centered, contemporary manifestation of the prophetic gift.

The prophetic gift beyond biblical times will not add anything to the New Testament but, rather, will affirm its attestation to Christ. Young Ellen White’s conversion story laid the foundation for a lifelong love and passion for Jesus Christ. She viewed the heavenly Father as a God of love who wanted to save people through the redemptive works of His Son. This perspective would become the keynote of her prophetic ministry and her favorite theme: the paternal love of God.

In one of her most moving statements, Ellen White wrote: “All the paternal love which has come down from generation to generation through the channel of human hearts, all the springs of tenderness which have opened in the souls of men, are but as a tiny rill to the boundless ocean when compared with the infinite, exhaustless love of God. Tongue cannot utter it; pen cannot portray it. You may meditate upon it every day of your life; you may search the Scriptures diligently in order to understand it; you may summon every power and capability that God has given you, in the endeavor to comprehend the love and compassion of the heavenly Father; and yet there is an infinity beyond. You may study that love for ages; yet you can never fully comprehend the length and the breadth, the depth and the height, of the love of God in giving His Son to die for the world. Eternity itself can never fully reveal it. Yet as we study the Bible and meditate upon the life of Christ and the plan of redemption, these great themes will open to our understanding more and more.”—Testimonies for the Church, vol. 5, p. 740.

Part III: Life Application

The following life application questions, drawn from the above commentary, are offered to enrich your class discussion. Choose from among them, and from those in the lesson, the ones that will best engage your class in meaningful reflection.

1. Before sin, Adam and Eve spoke with God “with no obscuring veil between.”—Ellen G. White, Patriarchs and Prophets, p. 50. What do you imagine it was like to experience face-to-face fellowship with the Almighty in the Garden of Eden, “with no obscuring veil between”?

2. The Hebrew word for “know” means relational and experiential knowledge, as well as intellectual knowing and understanding. In light of this definition, how did Adam and Eve “know” they were “naked” (Gen. 3:7)?

3. How did sin change the communication between God and human beings?

4. What does living in God's presence mean for us today, even though we no longer see Him face-to-face?

5. How can we cultivate a deeper personal relationship with God daily, as Adam and Eve once experienced in Eden?

6. What does it mean that all Scripture flows from the first gospel promise in Genesis 3:15? How do we see this theme repeated throughout the Bible?

7. Hebrews 1:1, 2 says that, in the past, God spoke through prophets, but in the last days, He has spoken through His Son. How do Jesus' life and teachings give us the clearest picture of God?

8. In what ways does God still communicate with us today? How can we become more attentive to His voice?

9. Ellen G. White's favorite theme was the paternal love of God. How does reflecting on God's love change our perspective on life and faith?
